

Lawmakers Fail to Pass a Tax Program For New York City

Legislature Must Return to Albany Next Week to Continue Discussion and Action on Problems—End Fourth Week.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 19 (P).—After nearly four weeks of disagreement on a tax plan to enable New York City to levy new taxes for unemployment relief, the 201 lawmakers of the New York Legislature were today bound to return Monday night to resume their extraordinary mid-summer session.

Hours of conference and debate behind closed doors yesterday and last night failed to produce a compromise between Tammany Hall's "blanket tax" plan, to enable the city to levy whatever new taxes it may see fit within its own borders, and the Republican stand that there must be a safeguard against the application of such taxes outside the city.

Some Democrats said that the proposed Republican amendments to the "blanket tax" bill might serve to prevent the Tammany administration in New York from levying either a stock transfer tax to apply to transfers originating and consummated within the city, or the proposed tax on the sale of real estate, which they only wanted clarifying amendments so that if the Democrats did levy a stock transfer or similar tax it could not be made to apply to non-residents.

While the Republicans were discussing the blanket tax matter in conference, Samuel Untermyer, special counsel to Mayor John P. O'Brien of New York, sent word to Albany that in his opinion the changes proposed by the Republicans might exempt non-resident riders from a tax on fare tax. He said further that the amendments might let the whole tax question up in litigation and make it impossible for the city to raise the needed funds.

In his telegram to the Democratic leaders, Senator John J. Duggan and Assemblyman Irwin W. Steingart, Untermyer suggested taxes on stock brokers themselves, banks and investment houses as possible new sources of revenue. He offered the view that they might be taxed, the same as real estate brokers.

WAR GLORY HAS CHANCE TO CLINCH HIS CLAIM TODAY

New York, Aug. 19 (P).—War Glory, famous son of an immortal father, Man O'War, went to the races today with a chance to clinch his claim on the three year old championship.

In the $25,000 Travers at Saratoga, War Glory can clear the tangled situation in a division where he has already won three stakes this year, the Saratoga, Kinner and Dwyer.

Inlander, Mrs. Sloan's surprise winner of the Arlington classic, carried the top weight of 128 pounds, eight more than War Glory, but was rated the top contender to the 8 to 5 favorite, particularly if the going was muddy. Inlander was coupled with Okapi, fast but scarcely considered fast enough for the mile and a quarter route, and Caesar's Ghost, winner of the Saratoga handicap.

The remainder of the field consisted of Lee Rosenberg's Kerry Patch, W. S. Kiltner's Sun Archer and Dark Winter, William Ziegler Jr.'s Puchero and Keep Out, F. A. Griffith's Sarada and Joseph E. Widener's Golden Way.

EXILED PRESIDENT OF CUBA TO LEAVE NASSAU

Nassau, N. P., Aug. 19 (P).—Gerardo Machado, deposed and exiled president of Cuba, prepared this morning to leave the hotel at which he has stayed since arriving here last Sunday, and it was believed he would leave on the steamship Franconia for Bermuda tonight.

The former Cuban chief executive previously paid the hotel charges, but did not reveal his destination, but the Bermuda steamer was said to be the only one leaving the island today.

A voyage to Bermuda had been one of the plans first considered by Machado and his party after their arrival at Nassau Sunday after a delayed flight from Havana.

Pittsburgh Banker Dead.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 19 (P).—Benjamin Thaw, Sr., Pittsburgh banker and member of the well known Thaw family, died today at his residence. He was 74. He was the father of the World War ace, Col. William Thaw, member of the Lafayette Escadrille, and a half brother of Harry K. Thaw.

Polling Places To Remain Unchanged

City Clerk William C. DeWitt stated today that he understood there would be no change made in polling places for the election this fall, and that the polling places are the same as last year. However, the election committee of the common council has saved the city about $200 in rentals as the committee has fixed minimum rental of $10 a day for each polling place. In other years, the rental have run from $10 to as high as $20 a day.

NRA Certificates Required of Advertisers

Not only is unauthorized use of the NRA emblem forbidden, but in order that it may be printed certain rules must be obeyed. The Freeman has just been informed. A newspaper or other publication may not permit an advertiser to use the emblem nor may a printer print it on stationery, etc., until the advertiser or customer has filed with such newspaper or printer a statement certifying that he has signed the President's agreement. To this certificate the advertiser must affix a sticker one and one-fourth inches in size, which he can obtain at the post office.

There is a penalty of $500 fine or six months in prison, or both, for violation of any NRA regulations, which penalty will be enforced once the confusion and haste due to putting in effect a complicated new system are over. Rigid enforcement is expected to begin on or before September 1.

As The Freeman has no desire to have either itself or its advertisers disobey the NRA regulations or incur penalties, the certificate referred to will be required in future of all advertisers using the NRA emblem. For their convenience, blank forms have been printed and may be obtained at The Freeman offices. The sticker must be obtained by the advertiser at the post office. Advertisers who have already used the emblem will also be required to file certificates.

Bodyguard for Young Rockefeller

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 19 (P).—Winthrop Rockefeller, scion of wealth, dined with a Yale classmate here last night while an armed bodyguard remained nearby.

The guard had accompanied the 21-year-old son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to Fort Worth from Houston, Tex., where Rockefeller had spent three weeks studying the oil industry. He was with young Rockefeller when he departed at midnight by airplane to return to his New York home. And in making the trip from the airport to the home of his friend, W. H. Slay, Jr., and returning to the airport, two Federal agents, with pistols and a sub-machine gun, augmented the bodyguard. The Federal men also remained on guard outside the home during dinner.

Young Rockefeller refused to answer any questions relative to the presence of the guards and smiled when asked whether he feared kidnappers.

"They've got them all locked up now, haven't they?" he asked. "We hope so," a bystander said. "Whew! So do I," exclaimed Rockefeller.

The Federal men said they were "just riding around." The young man's bodyguard, who brought tickets for the two under the names of Mr. Bennett and Mr. Wedelich, lifted an eyebrow and said "I don't believe I know the man," when asked about Rockefeller and the rumor of the spectre of kidnapping might have hurried him away from Houston and back to New York before the summer was over.

Truckload of Cattle Tips, Driver Unhurt

Shokan, Aug. 19.—Isadore Parrott, Kingston live stock buyer, had a narrow escape from injury at 11 o'clock Thursday night when a truckload of cattle which he was driving from Delaware county overturned on the north boulevard at the Lakewood House in Ashokan village. The accident took place when a Holstein bull, weighing 1,600 lbs., one of the cargo of seven head of cattle, broke his tie rope and swerved suddenly to one side, disconcerting the driver and causing the heavily loaded truck to tip. The three bulls and four cows were spilled into the road and ditch but miraculously escaped injury. Mr. Parrott also was uninjured and his machine was not damaged. Then followed a hard night for the Kingston man, who was obliged to scout around considerably before securing assistance in corralling his newly acquired herd. The cattle finally were enclosed in one of John Davis's meadows, between the state road and the New York Central R. R. tracks. Charles Schipp, of Supervisor Chester A. Lyons' Ashokan Garage, went to the scene of the accident with a towing truck and soon got the overturned machine right side up on the pavement. The largest bull, an animal which cost $125 a little more than a year ago and was bought for a fraction of that sum by Mr. Parrott for bologna meat, was gotten safely into the truck, after which his owner, assisted by Mr. Davis, Lewis Bodie and Henry Schipp, managed by dint of a lot of hard work to load the remaining waits of the herd. On the whole, Mr. Parrott took his mishap philosophically enough and incidentally won friends here by the patience and courtesy which he displayed in cooperating with his assistants in the righting of what was obviously a rather difficult situation.

Sells Residence Property.

Claude Markle of the sheriff's office has sold his residence property at 24 Emerson street to Henry Ruenenburgh, who will occupy it for a home.

Lamb Wanted For Ice Truck Theft

Employee of Kingston Ice Service Sent Out With Truckload of Ice—Delivered Ice to Customers, Collected Cash and Disappeared With Truck.

The mystery of a missing ice truck was cleared up Friday afternoon when the Kingston police department received a message from the Detroit, Mich., authorities that they held William Lamb, 19, in custody there and that the missing ice truck had been located in a garage in Chicago. Chief of Police J. Allan Wood said this morning that arrangements would be made to bring Lamb back to Kingston to stand trial on a charge of grand larceny.

According to the information obtained by the local police, young Lamb had been employed by George Quarto of 478 Albany avenue, to drive one of the delivery trucks of the Kingston Ice Service. About two months ago the young man started out with a truckload of ice which he delivered to customers and collected the cash for the ice.

That was the last heard of the young man and truck until word was received Friday of his apprehension in Detroit.

The arrest of Lamb was due to a letter that Chief Wood had sent to the Detroit police. From what Lamb had said while in Kingston, he was originally from Detroit where his father was a railroad man. That information was furnished the Detroit police who finally located the youth. According to the message received here the young man agreed to waive extradition. He told the Detroit police that the ice truck was in a garage in Chicago where it was located by the Chicago police.

Barbers Agree on Proposed NRA Code

Kingston Chapter Associated Master Barbers Met Friday and Adopted Proposed Plan Awaiting Approval of Washington.

Meeting Friday night with Joseph Leotta, secretary of the Kingston chapter of the Associated Master Barbers of America, Kingston barbers adopted the code of the national organization which is now up before NRA authorities at Washington for approval.

The barbers' plan calls for a 48-hour week with daily hours from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m., except Saturday when closing time is set for 9 p. m. These hours will be observed by local barbers displaying Blue Eagles, starting Monday. The plan adopted by the barbers Friday differs from that which they recently discussed before Judge Bernard A. Culleton, local NRA leader, in that shops will open earlier and close later. According to the blanket code, which the barbers were urged to accept, they would open their shops at 9:30 in the morning and close at 5 in the evening, every day except Saturday when closing time would be 5 o'clock.

At last night's meeting it was announced that 95 per cent of the barbers in Kingston had already signed the 48-hour code. Others are expected to sign within a few days. The new schedule of prices with a slight increase, as recently adopted by the barbers, will go into effect with the new hours, Monday.

Mr. Peskile, who has been in the restaurant business many years and who formerly was proprietor of the Sanitary Lunch on Central Broadway, will be pleased to see his old friends at his new place of business.

Foreign Legion Toils Excelsior Hose Won In Desert To Conquer Prize at Firemen's Convention Friday

Picturesque French Fighting Unit Sweet By Multitude of Bangers—Attempting to Establish Peace in Atlas Mountains.

Rabat, Morocco, Aug. 19 (P).—A scenario of long marches under burning desert suns and rebel warfare in Atlas Mountain fastnesses was winding to a close today for those heroes of many books and plays, the French Foreign Legionnaires.

The story goes back twenty-five, thirty years when France started to pacify Morocco, and with overtones of adventure and hardship progressed to a successful and dramatic conclusion, the final battles with six die-hard Berber tribes in the ravines 175 miles southeast of Rabat.

Twenty-five thousand French native troops and Legionnaires have endured the forced marches through stinging sand storms, the days of killing heat and nights of bitter cold, the sniping of desperate tribesmen, the hard rides after hard-riding Berber bands.

Today they had surrounded Djebel Badou, last stronghold of the dissidents, and they expect shortly the surrender of the rebels. They soon expect, too, to take the mountain peak Koucher, for the noted Sheriff Moulay Asselman and his followers have capitulated after holding out against French rule since 1912.

Four columns of French soldiers, clad in red and blue and white, are converging upon the stronghold. They toil up the winding trails day and night, through heat and cold. They lug their 75's up the steep slopes. Their airplanes reconnoitre overhead.

Between the lines of advancing infantrymen, cavalry, artillery men and native riflemen, the tribesmen are being caught along a 30-mile front. But rebel raiding parties harass them continuously. Sniping goes on from vantage points. Conquered camps of fellow tribesmen are pillaged by the tenacious foe.

The hooded berbers, a dozen or twenty of them under a leader chosen for his luck and daring, ride through the night, their rifles in hand, cocked; with a few dried figs their food on the swift dashes over 25 or 30 miles of hills and valleys.

At dawn the band chooses a place for an ambush and spreads out through rocky crags.

Then they pour a relentless fire of lead upon the toiling, sweating soldiers below. They slip past sentries, descend on the pacified tribes, kill the men, raze the villages, steal the flocks, and, with a victorious scream, ride back into the mountains. Pursuing troops can not catch the swift-moving bands. The Legionnaires, however, are determined to win their goal before winter. But even so, there is no assurance that the tribes will remain peaceful.

MRS. BLOOD GRANTED ENOCH ARDEN DECREE

After making one alimony payment to Mrs. Bessie E. Blood, Roy F. Blood disappeared 20 years ago and now the former has obtained an Enoch Arden divorce.

Mrs. Blood, who lives at 37 Catharine street, Albany, won a decree of separation and $10 a week alimony from Blood in 1913. After paying the sum for one week he left town, according to his wife. She testified she had not seen nor heard from him since, although relatives reported receiving a communication from him two years later from Rochester.

The couple were married in Kingston, December 27, 1906. There is one daughter, Geraldine. The Enoch Arden decree was granted by Supreme Court Justice Staley.

ITALIAN SUBMARINES IN NEW YORK HARBOR

New York, Aug. 19 (P).—New York harbor today received the first foreign undersea craft to put in here since World War days with the arrival of the Italian submarines Daillia and Milliere, part of the far flung picket line strung across the Atlantic for the Balbo flight. The submarines slipped into the harbor shortly after 7 a. m. (eastern standard time) unobtrusively and without a salute customarily given foreign war craft, because the submarines are not equipped to fire the customary answering salute.

Sleeping Sickness In St. Louis Worse

St. Louis, Aug. 19 (P).—The epidemic of "sleeping sickness" in St. Louis and vicinity, which appeared to have been checked two days ago, has taken a turn for the worse.

Since July 26, nine persons have died of the disease, while approximately a hundred others have been hospitalized. Three of the victims died yesterday. Seventeen new cases were reported during the last twenty-four hours. Of these, eleven were in the suburban districts which have been hit harder than St. Louis itself.

Local Hose Company Awarded Honor For Most Men in Parade—Union Hose Led Second Half of Big Parade—Reception Held Here.

Excelsior Hose Fire Company, which with Union Hose represented Kingston at the state firemen's convention in Poughkeepsie, Friday, returned to this city last evening with a prize—a big loving cup for having the largest number of men in line in the big parade.

After the parade, one of the longest in the history of firemen's conventions, there having been about 5,000 in line, representing more than 120 companies, the two Kingston companies returned home by way of the Rhinebeck ferry. From the ferry the firemen marched to the rooms of Union Hose on East Union street and enjoyed a social and refreshment.

The prize won by Excelsior is the second awarded the company for attending a convention with the largest number of men in line. Yesterday the Hurley avenue outfit had 127 marchers. The other prize was won at Nyack two years ago.

Other Prize Winners

After the parade the award for having the oldest pump in line went to the College Point, L. I., firemen, who hauled a pump first used in 1807.

The Mountaineers of Saranac Lake, were given the award for having traveled the longest distance to the convention by highway. White Plains won the prize for sending the largest number of men to the convention—104. The Ladies' Auxiliary of Yonkers was adjudged the best auxiliary.

Although it did not win any prize, Union Hose made a striking appearance at the head of the second division of the parade, which was so long it took more than three hours to pass one point. The Ponckhockie company had its brightly polished hose carriage, laden with floral bouquets, in the line, and it drew many favorable comments from the spectators that crowded both sides of the streets along which the parade passed. Approximately 40,000 saw the parade.

Union Hose was led in the parade by the Kingston Community Band. Among the guests of the company were Alderman John McGraw and Joseph Keegan, who have been members of the company for 45 years, and Chris Burke of Jersey City, who was a charter member when Union Hose was organized 57 years ago in 1876.

Excelsior Hose was headed by its own band with Foreman William R. Martin in the lead. Excelsior Hose, upon arriving in Kingston after the convention, acted as an escort to Union Hose from the Rhinebeck ferry to the hose house, where members and guests of both companies joined in the social.

Acting Mayor Heislman, Chief Joseph L. Murphy and Commissioners Harry Kaplan and Edward Moran were among the dignitaries present.

The HIDDEN DOOR
BY FRANK L. PACHARD

CHAPTER 34
 THE BATTLE BEGINS

GERMAINE: A moment of mental calm came and passed—replaced by a roasting thought that flashed into his mind. The launch was well hidden in the shadows back there along the river, and it was not at all likely that any search would be made for it.

The only risk on this score was the chance of contact with, and recognition by, Larocque and Bolduc. By these two men there were not Larocque and Bolduc, and from what they had said he gathered that, having now been rendered innocuous, he would be left where he was, and that they were callously indifferent as to what became of him afterward. For the time being then, at least, this meant safety for Germaine, thank God!

The gag in his mouth, distorting his lips and jaws, brought him brutal discomfort; his wrist felt numb where the belt was lashed around them. He strained a little at the lashing ineffectually; but otherwise he made no movement. His eyes fastened on the two men. They were standing within a foot or two of him. Both were armed with what looked like sawed-off shotguns—the butt of one of which he had no doubt, had crashed against his skull not so very long ago. They were silent now, saying nothing—waiting.

His eyes searched past the two men. The power house, which he could still see from where he lay, was, as Bouchard had said, only a few yards away from the club—perhaps forty at the outside. Trees, rising from the slope of the river bank, showed between the two buildings; but just beyond the power house there was an open space where there were no trees, and it seemed as though he could catch in the moonlight a glimpse of white, tumbling water.

There was no sign of any of the rest of Dollaire's men, nothing to indicate where they might be stationed, for, except for that single open space beyond the power house, the entire clearing was bordered by wooded land.

His glance rested on the two men again for an instant, and then, as though in a sort of premonitory fascination, his eyes fixed and held on the clubhouse in front of him. Details were of no consequence, but he found them registering themselves on his mind in an extraordinary sort of way. What difference did it make that the club was built in the style of a bungalow, that it was roomy and large, that it had a veranda on at least the two sides that he could see, and that—

A LOW whistle came suddenly from somewhere near at hand. It was answered by one of the two men. A form came into view through the trees.

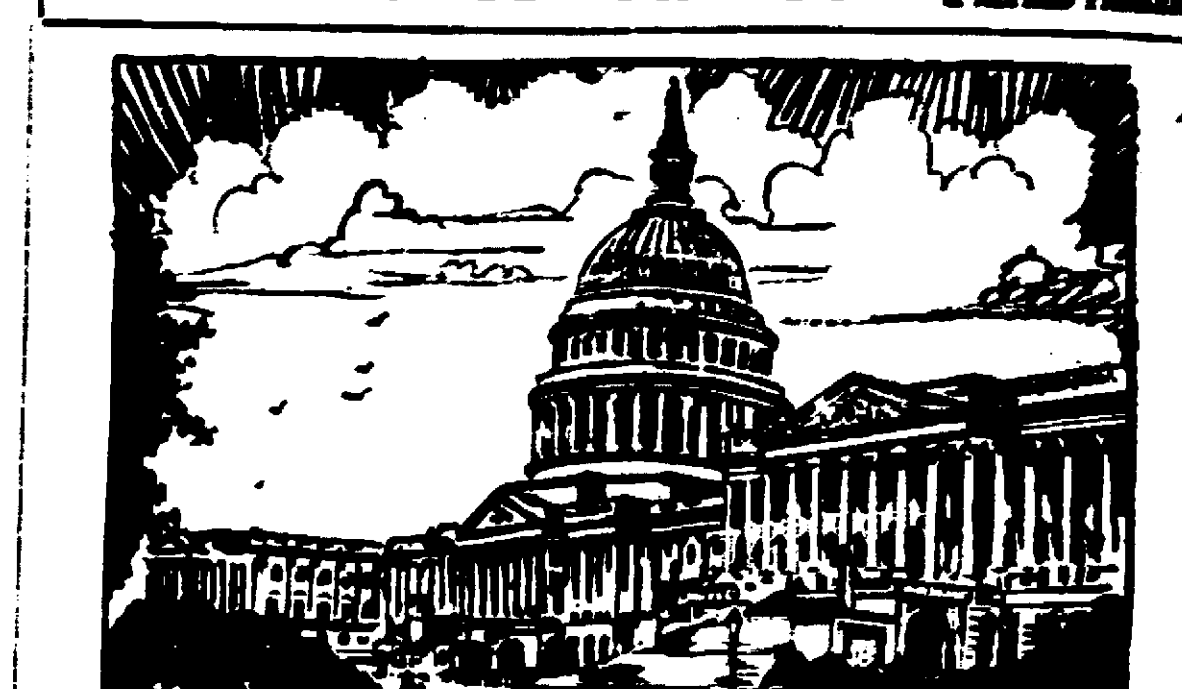

"That you, Paul?" demanded the voice of the man who had called himself Christophe.

"Sure!" replied the newcomer. "It's me for sure. You are all ready, you two, eh?"

"Hell!" it was Baptiste's voice this time, surely with complaint. "How much longer do we wait?"

The newcomer laughed in a sort of ugly mirth.

"Just long enough for me to tell you what you are to do—when you are through here. He has done well, Dollaire. He has—"

STROKES OF GENIUS
by SAMUEL JOHNSON & ALFRED PARKERThe CAPITOL
WASHINGTON D.C.

THE Capitol, the executive center of the United States Government, stands in Washington, D. C., on a hill nearly a hundred feet above the Potomac River. Its architect was William Thornton and President Washington laid the cornerstone on September 18, 1793. The main building is 751 feet long and is surrounded by an iron dome 270 feet high. In 1863, a twenty-foot statue of "Liberty" by Thomas Crawford was placed upon the dome.

The interior of the Capitol is decorated with historical paintings by the great American artist, John Trumbull. Near the huge central rotunda is the National Hall of Statuary in which each state may erect statues of two of her "chosen sons." Around the outside of the building are carved stone figures representing the progress of civilization in America. Underground passages connect the structure with the other government buildings.

On August 25, 1814, while America was at war with England, the British marines burned the Capitol. Its reconstruction was begun in 1815 and the edifice was completed in 1827. After numerous additions, it finally attained its present form in 1867.

Fleischmanns Water Supply Is Explained

A statement that Fleischmanns Community Church had been receiving "free water" for years, that the village water board told the church that it would not be required to pay for water, and that no bills were rendered to the church for water, was denied today by A. N. Todd, mayor of Fleischmanns, who called a special meeting of the village board Thursday evening and had sworn statements taken, which he said would help clear up the situation.

Mayor Todd explained that the trouble began when he took office, and after going over the accounts found that of about 192 consumers, 180 accounts were found which had not been paid. The church was one of these accounts. He explained that an arrangement had been made where the Ladies' Aid Society paid a certain percentage of the water bill, and that the remainder was paid by the pastor of the church, at present the Rev. F. P. Venable, whose family is without water.

Mayor Todd stated that until some time in 1930, the church water bill had been paid, and that since that time the bill had been left standing. The mayor said that the water bills had been rendered at intervals during the year, and were not always presented monthly.

When he took office, Mayor Todd requested that all water accounts be straightened up, and a plan was devised where a certain part of the past accounts could be paid together with the current bill. With the exception of the church and in one other case he said that the bills were being adjusted satisfactorily.

One other church in the village using water had paid water bills the same as all others using village water. No one in the village had been granted the right to use "free water," he said.

The statements follow: State of New York, County of Delaware, SS: Rutherford Brown, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he resides in the Village of Fleischmanns, N. Y., and is the village clerk of the Village of Fleischmanns, N. Y.

Your deponent further says that during the official year of 1931, your deponent was the clerk of the Board of Water Commissioners of the Village of Fleischmanns, N. Y., and that upon the 1st day of April, 1932, said Board of Water Commissioners of said village was abolished by resolution of the Board of Trustees of said village.

THE CHEERFUL TEMPERAMENT

"The cheerful temperament is a priceless possession, for when all is said, happiness is alone, the greatest or highest gift of our existence; wealth cannot purchase it, nor health insure it."

These words in the Medical Practitioner by Dr. E. A. Barton are worthy of our most serious consideration, because if you have all, and have not happiness, life is really a failure.

Certainly wealth cannot purchase happiness because, to the busy individual, wealth is a source of great anxiety at all times, and to the idle individual wealth is the source of temptation and trouble.

As a matter of fact, while it cannot be said in every case that health can insure constant happiness, it can be said that real happiness cannot be insured to you without health.

We are told that "happiness depends for the most part on our inner consciousness, our outlook on life, our faith in the future, and above all on the good companionship of our fellow men."

I believe we will all agree with this but nevertheless our inner consciousness, our outlook on life, our faith in the future and the good companionship of our fellow men depend to a very great extent upon our health.

I have more than once quoted the saying of Chesterfield "an attack of indigestion, a sleepless night and a rainy morning will make a coward of a man who would otherwise be a hero."

The difference between the coward and the hero then was that attack of indigestion which prevented sleep, aggravated by the gloomy morning.

If you live a normal life and are in no way conscious of having a body—no headache, stomach ache, no pain anywhere, good appetite, able to go anywhere on your feet, no breathlessness as you go about, get a good night's sleep—you have life's greatest asset, life's greatest boon.

MORE DANGER FROM TRAINS

Accidents caused by drivers who think they can beat trains have been many of late, some of them terrible to a spectacular degree. One thing that motorists should remember is that nowadays more of the rolling stock is out on the rails than for some time. The motorist who thinks he knows the schedule of trains which cross his accustomed routes may suffer disaster from the new train on the other track for which he has made no allowance.

There is more freight moving than for the last three years. There are extra passenger trains on many roads for people going to Chicago for the Fair as well as for buyers out to fill the empty shelves and the bewildered new dealers rushing to Washington to find out what they can do to be saved. All these must be reckoned with. Trains, too, are heavier than automobiles, though many drivers seem to forget that fact. They are getting heavier as business moves up. A locomotive will scatter four or five people and their car in bits along a road for a quarter of a mile and still be able to proceed, showing the effect of the experience only in minor dents and scratches.

There is a line of scripture which neatly fits the motorist who thinks he can beat the train: "He who loves danger shall perish in it."

HOMESPUN YARN

Time is saved in making sandwiches by blending the sandwich filling with the creamed butter.

Brass or copper may be polished by rubbing with a paste of oil and rottenstone.

Baking soda can be used to remove grease and discoloration from the electric waffle iron and to leave it bright and clean.

When a roadside stand is attractive to the eye, and the goods offered for sale are attractive to the palate, profits should follow.

Instead of illuminating the living room with one bright central light, it is better to place several lights where they are most needed. This gives a softer and more home like effect.

Before deciding on new wall paper, get several samples and place half of each sample in direct sunlight for a week. Then compare the two halves of each sample to see which papers are stained.

 Moles are carriers but occasionally eat some vegetable matter. Such rodents as field mice and pocket gophers that trespass in the runways of the moles are more responsible for the gnawing or hollowing out of nature paths and tubers.

ARE YOU SUITED IN SATIN?

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

A black satin suit has a white bengaline blouse with self-covered buttons and a stand-up collar.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

The climax of the Paris season confirmed the steady if slow revival of earrings. A great many of the smartest women at the races wore pearl ball earrings or pendant ones on slender chains, and at some of the galas in the evenings about a quarter of the women present wore earrings.

Bracelets had a good break, for not only were most of the afternoon dresses and many of the coats and jackets short sleeved, to the elbow or above, but a number of women wore their bracelets over their gloves, a style which has been seen before in the evening but very little in the daytime.

It is pleasant to find the coat dress, a fall perennial, quite frequently abandoning its role of the older, conservative woman's special standby and having its shoulders lifted.

More attention is being given flowers as trimmings, large flowers posed at shoulders and at bases of décolletages.

The tunic idea is apparent in ensembles, with coats adopting a tunic length, and at first sight suggesting a dress.

The tunic dress is highlighted for street, afternoon, dinner and evening wear, sometimes designed to suggest a coat, swinging over at the side, sometimes fastening down the front and sometimes buttoning down the back.

Erect or fence collars are highly regarded in autumn collections of daytime fashions. The collars in the fabric agreeing with the dress also in a contrasting fabric, as, for example, satin on light-weight woolen or on crepe, and again in fur, with ermine the important pelt, sometimes terminating in tails.

The sleeve is equally nice in 3/4 length, as shown in the small front view, which also pictures the dress without the over-front on the waist. Yoke sections, in pointed outline support the slim line skirt. An altogether graceful model embodying style features that will appeal to Miss or Matron of slight proportions.

Designed in 5 sizes: 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19 with corresponding bust measure, 29, 31, 33, 35, 37. Size 13 will require 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. The dash of ribbon requires 2 1/4 yards or, if made of material a strip 5 inches wide and 2 1/4 yards long.

Above: A black sheer velvet dress for day-evening is interesting in its yoke treatment with shirred-on-elastic sections introduced at the shoulders and in a deep section that gives suggestion at the waistline and hips. Rhinestone buttons are shiny accents.

An interesting fabric combination for the younger set is illustrated in this junior frock—a hairy surfaced woolen and chiffon velvet. Even the pocket is faced with the trimming material.

Below, left, is a rabbit's-hair-angora-knit frock in lively green that is individualized by its novelty which, too broad collar and metal hook and eye trimmings.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—There's a great deal more than the plight of the Cuban people that is worrying President Roosevelt and his advisers as the little island republic continues to be a state of political uncertainty.

Our relations with the Latin American countries at the present show great promise. The marines have left Nicaragua. Haiti is due to be evacuated long before the treaty requirements. The accusation so often leveled at the United States in these countries that American capital is inevitably followed by American marines and American warships seems to be losing much of its force.

A better feeling prevails, too, because President Roosevelt appears desirous of bringing about an understanding between the two continents during his administration. His announced policy of "good neighbors" with the Latin American countries is expected to bring results.

Enter, A Menace
The approaching Pan-American conference at Montevideo in December has a large place in his scheme of promoting this feeling of good will.

He thinks it so important and is so hopeful that it will bring important economic results to all concerned that Secretary Hall of the state department may attend. The Cuban situation threatens the President's whole plan.

Were American marines and blue-jackets ordered to the island, there is indication the campaign of anti-American propaganda that has caused such concern in the past might be revived.

Again there might be heard the warning to beware of the greed of the United States.

The charge that once American capital has gained a foothold in Latin American countries, the independence of those countries is lost might resound more strongly than in the past.

Treading Carefully

THAT'S one reason that the President, through his personal representative in Cuba, is handling the situation so delicately and with such care. Both he and Ambassador Welles are trying to prevent embarrassment in the future.

American troops were ordered to Cuba back in 1906 and exercised the power of government in the island for three years. Again in 1912, on account of disturbances at Santiago at the sugar mills a partial intervention took place at the request of the Cuban government. However, in the latter case the American troops acted as a police force and did not take over the government of the republic.

TRUCK DAMAGED ON

SOUTH BOULEVARD

A brand new ton and a half truck was damaged so that it had to be towed in when it turned over on its side at the entrance to the South Boulevard near Fischer's Hotel early Friday evening. The truck, loaded with cauliflower, was owned and driven by Joseph Rosa of Delhi. Rosa, driving toward Kingston, turned toward the entrance to the South Boulevard to avoid hitting two trucks that were coming up Route 28, and a car that was parked on the right side of the road, the situation being made worse by the slippery condition of the road following the heavy rain Friday afternoon. The load of cauliflower was dumped out along the ledge at the right of the road. No one was hurt.

Kingston: "Narrow Corner." Somerset Maugham's novel of love and romance in the tropics, has been brought to the screen in this beautifully photographed and well acted tale of an outcast white boy who steals the sweetheart of his best friend, and although the play seems unduly depressing at times, the direction and settings of the production are so finely drawn that the picture is much worth seeing. Some of the scenes aboard boat, especially the storm scenes, are as well done as one could possibly desire. A fine cast includes Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Patricia Ellis, Ralph Bellamy, Dudley Digges, Arthur Hohl and William V. Mong.

Orpheum: "Luxury Liner" and "Scarlet River." George Brent, Frank Morgan, Virgilio Osbourne, Zita Johann, Alice White and C. Aubrey Smith are among the many excellent players in this talkie that moves along in the "Grand Hotel" manner. Excitement, romance and danger are all found on shipboard. "Scarlet River" is Tom Keene's latest western effort, and it is one of his best.

Broadway: "Her First Mate." Zasu Pitts of the guttering hands and Slim Summerville who is capable of looking less intelligent than any other actor, are co-starred again in this new comedy riot that has to do with the sea, domesticity, coupled with disagreements and troubles of all descriptions. Mr. Summerville has his mind set on the life of a sailor, but Miss Pitts wants to settle down on land. The play has been written to give the two stars full opportunity to portray their talents.

Orpheum: "Sport Parade" and "Treasure." Joel McCrea and Marian Marsh star in American sport in the first double feature attraction, and both perform capably. "Hurricane Express" continues as another episode as an added feature on the program.

MAY REFINED UNITED STATES GOLD ORE IN CANADA

Ottawa, Aug. 19 (AP)—Official announcement was expected today on new regulations which will permit United States gold ore and concentrates to enter Canada for smelting and refining.

One of the essential provisions will be to allow the Canadian mint authority to extend its refining authority to the United States, as well as Canadian, gold. It was predicted that the effect of the new rules may be that the bulk of the United States annual production of gold, amounting to approximately $10,000,000, will be smelted and refined in this country. The smelting would be done largely in northern Ontario and at Trail, B. C. The gold would be put into a purer state at the Ottawa mint.

The United States producer would benefit by receiving world market prices, averaging $29.50 to $30 per ounce, against $29.67 per ounce fixed by the American mint.

The whole procedure is understood to have been favorably viewed at a meeting of the cabinet council yesterday.

Gray Squirrels Plentiful

Shokan, Aug. 19.—Gray squirrels appear plentiful enough in the woods at this time, though these handsome, bushy-tailed rodents make a clever way of making themselves extremely scarce around hunting season time. At any rate they are far more wary when the guns begin to bang-bang (both barrels), and moreover being about the same color as the bark of the sugar maple trees, the squirrels frequently flatten out against the upper branches and remain there, possum-like, while hunters pass beneath them blissfully unconscious of the game almost at their gun tips.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Hollywood is a "second edition" of its famous, and now we're hearing about a character actor who is a "second Karl Lauder."

"The American Jansage," to be more specific, is what H. P. Schulberg observed concerning Edward Arnold when he placed the actor under contract. Arnold does bear some resemblance to the German who before talking was Hollywood's foremost exponent of screen characterization, but his technique is not imitative, and Hollywood's inference, like Schulberg's, is wholly complimentary.

Carrying On

It's an old Hollywood custom, the naming of "successors" to this or that famous star. Its beginnings may be traced back to the days of early serial queens, when Helen Holmes, perhaps, was labeled a "second Pearl White"—Pearl having been the screen's shining star of halfbreath melodrama.

Mary Miles Minter, coming with girlishness and curls in the wake of Mary Pickford's success, was for long "another Mary Pickford," although the first Mary has outlasted by years the "second." In the same way Alice White was catalogued as a "new Clara Bow," and neither of them liked it.

Tribute to the phenomenal hold the young Italian Valentino had on the fans is the number of "second Rudys" that have risen and fallen since his death. Echoes of that popularity rang again in George Raft, began his climb to stardom, there being many observers to note George's resemblance to the departed idol. Ricardo Cortez was another contender in an earlier day for Valentino's following. Like Raft, however, he succeeded on his own rather than on the wave of Valentino's worship.

"Successors to Lon Chaney" have been almost as prolific as "second Valentinos." For a time after the famous Lon's death an actor who appeared as a "second Chaney" was suggested as a "second Chaney." The mantle probably rests now on the broad shoulders of Boris Karloff, not through his own seeking but through the coincidence of successive movie roles.

Marlene, The First

"Second Garbo" too have been numerous, the most serious threat being in the person of Marlene Dietrich. Miss Dietrich, however, soon proved herself a "first Marlene" rather than a second anybody.

Likewise Edward Arnold has played in enough films to establish himself as a "first Arnold"—but Hollywood loves "second editions."

"The Commoner"

The satirical "The Commoner" was applied to William Jennings Bryan early in his political days because of his championing of the cause of the common people. After the election of 1896 he established at Lincoln, Neb., a political magazine of wide circulation which he named the Commoner.

SHOKAN

Shokan, Aug. 19.—Mrs. D. J. Hoyer and son, Robert, of Garden City, L. I., were callers at the summer home of Mrs. Emma Holden of Van Stoenburgh hill Wednesday.

E. Cary Postock of Bryn Athyn, Pa., is spending a vacation with his family at the Postock country home on the mountain road. Mr. Postock is a lawyer with offices in Philadelphia.

There is a pretty fair demand for broilers and old hens at this time, though few farmers seem disposed to part with their laying stock. Some of those making inquiries for broilers are unwilling to pay the price of 20 cents a pound which local poultrymen are asking for birds weighing around two and one-half pounds. Occasionally some come through the village offering broilers at 15 cents, thus spoiling the market for chicken raisers who feel that present feed prices justify decent returns from their flock.

Mrs. Joseph Mooney of Kingston greeted old acquaintances in this section Wednesday. Mrs. Mooney is a native of Olive, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Every of Traver Hollow.

Miss Lydia Scott of the west end has returned from a visit to New York city, where she was employed as a hospital nurse before removing to Shokan.

Oral Dietz of Kingston and Henry Bell of Newburgh were numbered among the hustling out of town young business men in the hub of the reservoir section Friday.

The sum of $125 was cleared by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church at their annual fair and supper held on Wednesday, August 9.

Joseph Reilly, best known summer resident of the village center, made a business trip to New York city during the week.

Major George W. Eastwood, commanding officer of Camp No. 2, C. C. C., is spending a brief furlough with his family in the metropolitan district.

The summer boarders are beginning to complain about the cloudy and rainy weather which has obtained for several days past. They get tired of sitting around the house so much, figuring probably that they get plenty of that kind of recreation back home. As for the farmers, they would like to see at least another week of showers and muggy weather to make the corn jump along to maturity before Jack Frost calls and nips the blades.

Paul James, local contractor, is getting out more oak store wood for his customers in the village. Wood is reported to have advanced in price from $2.50 to $3.00 a cord here, and it's about time, say the dealers.

The camp at Soleville is using natural ice in its kitchen cooler near the kitchen shack. The ice is supplied by Leonard Colango, the general storekeeper, and is cut on a day is required to refrigerate the beef and other food supplies kept in the big ice box.

Very few Shokan residents knew anything about the Lasher bungalow fire at Ashokan early Friday morning until the news spread about town after breakfast time. A number of people living quite near the scene of the fire slept right through the excitement which was small compared to that which ensued upon the occasion of the Every fire in the same section last month.

Miss M. Brennan of New York city is a guest at the home of her friends, Mrs. Wilhelmina Fuller, and daughter, Mrs. W. Mulligan, at Mt. Laurel Lodge.

The new seeding greenward of large acreage at Beechford Farms, along Route 28, forms one of the outstanding beauty spots in the northeastern part of the town. The whole Bailey stock farm in fact is one of the show places in Olive.

Olive S. S. Meeting in 1901.

Shokan, Aug. 19.—A local event of August 20, 1901, was the quarterly meeting of the Olive town Sunday School Association, at the Sunnyside M. E. Church. Reports read at the convention showed that two new schools, both active, had been added—one at Acorn Hill with Walter Bush as superintendent, and the other at Olive City with J. Wesley Bishop in charge. Olive Bridge school reported seven teachers and 50 pupils. Tongore six teachers and 50 pupils. Acorn Hill eight teachers and 75 pupils, while the school at Palenstown, just over the town line in Rochester had 98 persons exclusive of the six teachers. The Rev. Charles W. Kinney, pastor of the Shokan Reformed Church, was president of the town association at the time of the convention, and John Wesley Bishop, one of the old time public school teachers in Olive, was secretary of the organization.
